I think it is time for everyone to wake up and stop trying to beat a dead horse. The amount of money and time spent on trying to squeeze another dollar out of Microsoft is just so stupid. There is a reasonable settlement on the table, a settlement that was put together by some very wise people with very sincere motives who wanted to move on rather than spend the rest of their lives litigating. Courts are to resolve problems, not find a way for simpletons to waste their lives on de minimus petty schemes. The courts should force a settlement which for all intensive purposes appears reasonable.
